ATTACHMENT TO 2007 CPNI CERTIFICATION OF CINCO TELECOM CORP.

The operating procedures of Cinco Telecom Corp. ("Cinco") ensure compliance with the requirements set forth in section 64.2001 et seq. of the Commission's rules (hereinafter "CPNI rules"). Cinco offers two services: (1) prepaid calling cards/virtual calling cards (hereinafter "calling cards") and (2) international carrier's carrier service (wholesale transport and private lines). Most of Cinco's calling cards are sold through third-party vendors. Cinco has no access to these customers' names, addresses or other identifying information because it has no billing or payment relationship with the customer and does not need any such information to provide the service. As a result, Cinco does not have access to any CPNI in connection with these calling cards.

For the calling cards Cinco sells directly, customer identifying information and characteristics are gathered for purposes of processing payments, providing call balance and otherwise providing the service. Regarding its international carrier's carrier services, Cinco gathers customer names, addresses and other similar information for ongoing billing and service relationship. This is a completely separate business, however, from its calling card services. Any CPNI gathered in connection with the carrier's carrier service is never used, disclosed or accessed in connection with the calling card services, or vice versa, because such information is of no commercial value to the other business. In any event, Cinco does not use CPNI to market any of its services. It only uses, discloses or permits access to CPNI for purposes of providing the subscribed/purchased service, which is permitted without customer approval under Section 64.2005(a) of the CPNI rules.

Cinco also takes several steps to discover and protect against attempts to gain unauthorized access to its customers' CPNI, as well as properly authenticate its customers prior to disclosure to customers. For the calling cards it sells directly, customers are authenticated through the use of a user ID and password before they can access any CPNI when calling Cinco's customer service number or accessing its website, and any CPNI exchanged between the Cinco website and its customers is sent and received in encrypted form.

Regarding its international carrier's carrier services, Cinco concludes a non-disclosure agreement ("NDA") and master services agreement ("MSA") with its customers that protect their confidential information. The NDA specifically commits Cinco to protect from unauthorized disclosure all records or information in written, oral, graphic, machine-readable or electronic format relating to Cinco's customer's customers, services, products or business, as well as any other information reasonably understood as confidential. It provides that such information may only be used for purposes of negotiating the MSA, and prohibits disclosure to third parties, except upon written consent from the customer or as is required by law. Cinco may use the information for purposes of negotiating the MSA, and may disclose, on a need-to-know basis, the information to agents and independent contractors who are bound to protect the information from unauthorized use and disclosure under a written agreement. In the MSA, Cinco again commits to protect its customers' confidential information except upon receipt of customer consent or as is required by law. The MSA specifically provides that any personal data, such as contact information, may only be processed or transferred for purposes of fulfilling the terms of the agreement or otherwise providing the service. In addition to these contractual protections, any disclosures of CPNI to Cinco's customers are only made to the customer's dedicated account representative. Regarding call detail/call records, the only non-aggregate information pertaining to the transmission of specific telephone calls to which Cinco has access in connection with its carrier's carrier services is limited to the called number and duration, and this is not associated with the name, address or any other identifying information of any ultimate end user. Regardless, Cinco would only disclose such information to its customer's designated representative. Finally, Cinco's carrier-customer information is not available online or in a store-front, which further reduces the risk of unauthorized disclosure.

For all services, Cinco limits the number of employees authorized to access CPNI. These employees access the information only for purposes of and to the extent necessary to provide the service, render bills and handle any related legal issues. They are trained in the proper handling and use of this information, which is not only protected under the CPNI rules, but is also commercially-sensitive information that Cinco carefully guards for its own business interests. Any employee using, disclosing providing access to this information for any other purpose would be subject to discipline, including potential dismissal.
